

Georgia O'Brien Fowler had been thinking about getting her smile rejuvenated for a while. She debated whether she might be too old for a younger looking smile. How would that look? How would it affect her everyday life? What would her friends and family think? Would they think she's vane? Would it feel natural?

We Feel Great!

We only wish we'd done this sooner.

Obviously struggling with internal issues, she decided to meet with several cosmetic dentists in her area to get a feel for their attitude and perception of someone like her having the procedure.

"I have to admit that I wasn't comfortable with every doctor or every office," says Georgia. "I found that you need to do some research on the internet and meet several doctors before making your decision. Not all dentists are created equal. Some have more experience, some use better materials and some have the artistic talent it requires to match your new teeth to your face.

"And just as important...do you like the doctor and his team? I used all of these criteria to choose my dentist and it has worked out even better than I thought it could. The procedure only took a few visits and my smile feels great. I get compliments every single day and I love it!

"My doctor listened in detail to what I had been through and what I wanted for my dentistry. He answered my questions and explained all of my options and choices."

"I knew Georgia was happy with her choice to have the cosmetic dentistry," says her husband Al, "but the day she came home with the makeover she couldn't stop smiling and I couldn't stop looking at her smile. It looks so fantastic and she was so elated.

"I thought she was beautiful before the smile makeover. Now she's a knock out. She smiles everywhere we go and people are always telling her what a great smile she has. I just love going places with her and that infectious smile.

"Well, you know what had to happen next. I had to get my smile makeover. However, mine was special case. I had a lot of old failing dentistry that needed redone. Fortunately, it appears like this new dentistry not only looks much better, it functions and feels better. I can only tell you that this feels like the very teeth I was born with."

His team will welcome you to a complimentary consultation and will proudly show you their many client before and after photos.

If Al and Georgia's success story has inspired you, here are a few important guidelines you should follow in choosing an aesthetic dentist for your own smile makeover.

Education. There are institutes dedicated solely to teaching dentists the art and science of cosmetic dentistry. In most cases it will take a dentist several years and tens of thousands of dollars to complete this advanced course work.

Experience. For cosmetic dentistry to look completely natural the dentist needs advanced training, must have an artistic flair and lots of experience. They must balance what you have asked for with what will look natural. Each and every porcelain veneer and crown must be shaped to fit your face perfectly. Experience is the only way they can learn what works best.

Materials and Laboratory. If you want your smile to look natural the veneers should be translucent (allow some light through), much like our natural teeth. Only the best porcelain veneers are translucent and strong enough to last. Then it takes a talented laboratory technician to shape each veneer and crown to the dentist's specifications.

The Consultation. During the consultation be sure to view the dentist's before and after photos (actual client photos, not bought or sample photos). Does the work look natural? This is also the time to show the doctor what you like and don't like about certain makeovers and ask specific questions about the procedures.

When it comes to such an important decision, be sure to do your homework. Ask the right questions. At All Bright Dental, they're happy to provide the answers you need and the smile you deserve.
