

Mrs. Colorado...

Janelle Spahn, the newly crowned Mrs. Colorado Globe, drove all the way to Las Vegas with her mother and two young daughters to perfect her already radiant, winning smile. When asked why, she answered, "I have always admired a great smile. In fact, the first money I ever saved, I spent on cosmetic dentistry to fix a small gap in my upper front teeth. That was in 1998." That smile helped her to win the Mrs. Colorado Globe crown earlier this year.

She explained further, "One of the prizes for winning the Mrs. Colorado Globe pageant was a Smile Makeover from the MAC Veneers Company. They are well known for producing some of the finest hand crafted porcelain veneers in the dental industry. I couldn't pass that up. After winning, they recommended one of their top docs to perform my Smile Makeover, Saeid Mohtashami, DDS of All Bright Smiles in Las Vegas."

"I didn't waste any time," she said. "I inspected his website where I found more information about the doctor and was able to see some of his before and after case photos. It was amazing to see how completely natural his work looked. I quickly contacted his office to schedule my complimentary consultation. A week later my mom, the girls and I made the drive."

"From the moment I walked in to the office, I was treated like royalty. When I told them that wasn't necessary, one of his team members said they treat everyone that way. They make sure their guests are comfortable from the very beginning. The team pampered me as they did my cleaning and x-rays. When I saw Dr. Mohtashami he was very likable and gentle. We discussed exactly why I wanted my Smile Makeover and what could be done to improve my smile. I didn't really think he could make a huge difference; after all, I had just won a pageant with this smile. I was very wrong!"

Over the next two visits (two more trips from Colorado to Las Vegas and back), the doctor would transform a pretty good smile into a fantastic smile. "He replaced my old veneers (4) and added six more across the upper teeth in my smile zone," said Janelle. "I can't believe the improvement. My friends and family were astounded at how big of a difference just the temporary veneers made, and now that I have the permanent veneers, they can't stop talking about how beautiful my new smile is. That's exactly what I wanted".

"When I saw Janelle's contestant photos," said Dr. Mohtashami, "my first thought was that she has such a beautiful face and that she would look terrific with a smile that compliments her features. I could see she had a good smile, but I could also see where I could improve on it. I was anxious to meet her and show her how I could help her."

When it comes to cosmetic dentistry, it pays to go to the best. Do the research. It's important to find out specifically what training the doctor has. Cosmetic Dentistry is not a recognized specialty and any dentist can advertise that they are a cosmetic dentist. And any good dentist should be concerned with the aesthetic or cosmetic appearance of their work; however, there can be a huge gap in the specific training for cosmetic procedures such as veneers, bonding, metal-free crowns, metal-free filling and smile makeovers, from one dentist to another.

A patient should always ask about the materials the doctor uses for their cosmetic procedures because you will only want the very best veneers in your mouth. They need to look natural and be durable.

The lesser quality veneers are thicker and not as durable. They don't look natural.

Experience is a must have when a dentist is going to improve on Mother Nature. A patient will want someone who has performed these delicate procedures more than just a few times. Ask to see the doctor's photo album featuring many before and after photos of their very own patients. Many dental offices use stock photography to advertise or sell cases. Some of the photos are even of people with natural smiles and haven't ever had any major cosmetic dentistry performed.

Dr. Saeid Mohtashami attends the prestigious Las Vegas Institute of Advanced Dental Studies regularly to update his cosmetic dentistry training and advance his practice. Dr. Mohtashami has the training, the experience, and uses only the best materials he can find for his clients. He proudly offers MAC Veneers, the highest quality veneers available.

Janelle is now off to compete in the Miss USA Globe pageant. Armed with her new, All Bright Dental smile, Janelle is sure to acquire more pageant crowns. We wish her the best and much more success!
